New forest inventories show that the nation's forests absorb nearly half of our greenhouse gas pollutants if left undisturbed. Forests are a critical part of the global atmospheric carbon cycle that contribute to climate stabilization by absorbing (sequestering) and storing vast amounts of carbon dioxide in trees (live and dead), soils and understory foliage. As a forest ages, it continues to accumulate and store carbon, functioning as a net carbon "sink" for centuries. Alberto Giacometti's extensive repertoire of works on paper is generally known, but the drawings and watercolours held by his brother Bruno (1907/2012), which were recently bequeathed to the Kunsthaus Zrich, are much less familiar. The approximately 70 pencil and pen drawings, some created using ball-point, coloured crayon and lithographic chalk, as well as six watercolours and a pastel, have rarely been exhibited and include some genuine revelations. This intimate and informal collection of drawings by Alberto Giacometti underlines the fundamental importance of the medium to his work. It spans his entire artistic

There are many gas stations - the most notable being Texaco, Puma and Uno throughout the city. Many offer full-service for a higher price, so be sure to check if you are at the full service or the self-service pumps. Gasoline fluctuates between $4-$5 a gallon, averaging about $4.50

Other good birds in the Algoma Rd. area: one RED-SHOULDERED HAWK in some cottonwoods on the south end of the road where it meets 97, a good number of TRI-COLORED BLACKBIRDS along with the other blackbirds and starlings. Believe I heard a YELLOW-HEADED BLACKBIRD there but did not search for it (and there are lots of starlings), saw one BROWN-HEADED COWBIRD. I heard what sounded like a MOUNTAIN QUAIL

At Wood River Wetlands there were numerous SONG SPARROWS and a few VARIED THRUSH. All the waterfowl were distant in the lake. We have filled our rental car's tank 4 times on this trip. Two of those times were at Pemex stations on Highway 307: one of them just south of Playa del Carmen, and the other one just north of Tulum centro. In both cases, the bill was over 500 pesos, so I handed the attendant a 500-peso bill and a 100-peso bill. In both cases, they deftly switched the 500-peso note for a 50-peso note, and told me I had made a mistake. The first time it happened, I was sure that I had given him the right notes, but gave him the benefit of the doubt, and took back the 50 and gave him a(nother) 500. But the more I thought about it afterwards, the more I became convinced that I'd been the victim of a sleight-of-hand trick. I could of waited later, I hit another Hwy 307 Pemex, and was distracted by some thought, and forgot about the sleight-of-hand danger. Sure enough, exactly the same thing happened again, and I know it wasn't my mistake, because I took the 500 from a pocket that only contained 500's. There was a local cop nearby, so I didn't challenge the attendant. With Mexico's Napoleonic legal code, the attendant only had to tell the cop I was trying to cheat him, and I'd spend the rest of my vacation in jail.

The play always seems to start with the attendant being very friendly and curious about your trip. They use these questions to make sure you're a tourist, and not an ex-pat (who might be able to cause problems for them). The friendliness also makes it harder for us to accuse them of cheating us. I had no such problems in Merida or Cozumel: it seems to be a highway 307 scam. Has anyone else noticed it? Eduardo Manso's Shentox is a constructed square geometric grown out of the Tropea, 52, of Newport News, Virginia, was sentenced yesterday to 336 months and a lifetime of supervised release following his convictions on three counts of receipt of child pornography and one count of making a false statement to an agent of the United States.

Dana J. Boente, Acting United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia, FBI Special Agent in Charge Royce E. Curtin, and Richard Myers, Chief of Newport News Police, made the announcement after sentencing by United States District Judge Robert Doumar.

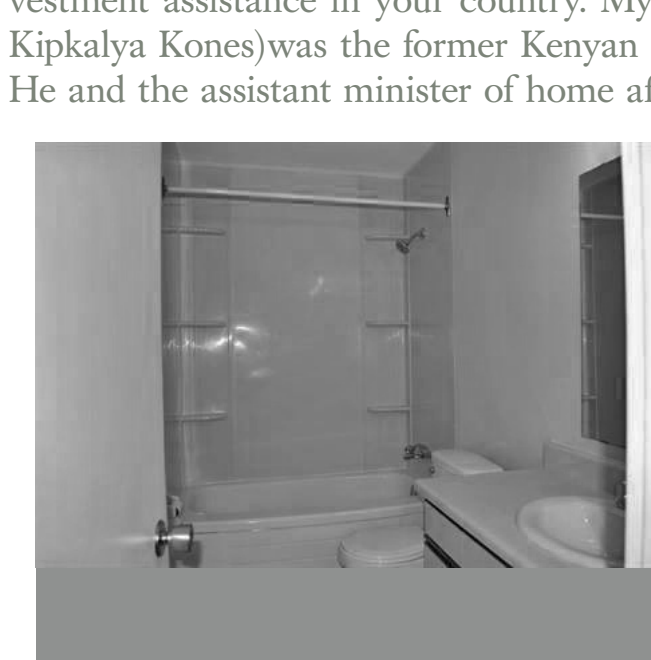

Tropea pleaded guilty on November 7, 2013. According to court documents, on May 8, 2013, police responded to the Host Inn where Tropea was living after a friend of his had not heard from him in several days. Upon arriving at the hotel, the manager informed them that a surveillance tape showed Tropea leaving the hotel on May 5, 2013, on his bicycle but not returning. Police entered the room to investigate the missing persons report and found numerous phone numbers inside the room. Officers called several people to try and locate Tropea, including his probation officer, whose business card was located in the hotel room. While in the room, officers found a laptop computer as well as a coffee can full of police drives. After speaking to the probation officer, police learned that Tropea was on federal supervised release for fraud and possession of child pornography and was barred from having a computer. The search was stopped when they discovered he was in violation of his supervision. FBI agents obtained a search warrant and numerous items were seized, including the computer and thumb drives. Tropea was later located at an area jail. A forensic exam of the computer and thumb drives was conducted and more than 40,000 images of child pornography were found. This case was investigated by FBI and Newport News Police. Assistant United States Attorney Lisa R. McKeel prosecuted the case on behalf of the United States. For about the last decade, Israel and US neocon hawks have been trying to convince the world that Iran is six months away from producing a nuclear bomb, and the dire consequences if they're not stopped. Israel's cited source for this evidence is their vaunted intelligence services which have been proven wrong time and time again. Realizing that President Obama and the rest of the world is sick and tired of their "crying wolf," Israel and certain neocon related elements within the US military and intelligence apparatus are clearly getting desperate for action which now appears to be in the form of a joint false flag operation to implicate Iran. The state, after the coordinated nationwide eradication of Occupy encampments, has relentlessly used the courts to harass and neutralize Occupy activists, often handing out long probation terms that come with activists' forced acceptance of felony charges. A felony charge makes it harder to find employment and bars those with such convictions from serving on juries or working for law enforcement. Most important, the long probation terms effectively prohibit further activism. The Occupy Wall Street movement was not only about battling back against the rise of a corporate oligarchy that has sabotaged our democracy and made war on the poor and the working class. It was also about our right to peaceful protest. The police in cities across the country have been used to short-circuit this right. I watched New York City police during the Occupy protests yank people from sidewalks into the street, where they would be arrested. I saw police routinely shove protesters and beat them with batons. I saw activists slammed against police cars. I saw groups of protesters suddenly herded like sheep to be confined within police barricades. I saw, and was caught up in, mass arrests in which those around me were handcuffed and then thrown violently onto the sidewalk. The police often blasted pepper spray into faces from inches away, temporarily blinding the victims. This violence, carried out against nonviolent protesters, came amid draconian city ordinances that effectively outlawed protest and banned demonstrators from public spaces. It was buttressed by heavy police infiltration and surveillance of the movement. When the press or activists attempted to document the abuse by police they often were assaulted or otherwise blocked from taking photographs or videos. The message the state delivered is clear: Do not dissent. Attn: My name is Mr. Don Eric. I work as the operational manager in account management section in charge of credit and foreign bills of one of the prime banks here in London. On a routine inspection I discovered a dormant domiciliary account with a Balance Of (Forty eight million two hundred and twenty three thousand POUNDS STERLING) On further discreet investigation, I also discovered that the account holder has died long ago with his family on a fatal Auto-accident leaving no beneficiary to the account and no other person knows about this account. I am in close contact with the manager of the bank here who is my partner and he is willing to approve the transfer to any reliable and trustworthy foreigner with a foreign bank account because the former operator of the a/c is a foreigner and from Australia in particular. I am certainly sure that he has no written or oral WILL attached to the account ,no beneficiary and nobody will come again for the claim of this money. It is only a foreigner who can claim this money with legal claims to the account holder which I will provide to you if you are interested, therefore I need your cooperation in this transaction. The difference in country of origins is not a hindrance to the success of this transaction. This money will remain useless in this dormant account if I did not transfer the fund out to a foreign account. I will provide the necessary information and documents needed in order to claim this money. I only need your cooperation as a foreigner to provide your safe bank account information for the transfer. At the conclusion of this transaction, your share will be 25% of the total transfer sum, 70% for me and my partner while 5% will be set aside for any expenses both parties might incur during the process of the transfer. The US military is one of the greatest polluters and users of fossil fuels on the planet. When [art] becomes the object of academic disciplines as it is today, discourse can become a site of struggle among the factions and interest groups that compete for the cultural authority to speak about [art]. The expert critical and technical languages that these groups invent can foster a social bond among those who share them, but they can also alienate and exclude outsiders. The Children's Aid Society was founded in 1853 by Charles Loring Brace and a group of social reformers at a time when orphan asylums and almshouses were the only "social services" available for poor and homeless children. Brace's theory of an organization devoted to helping poor children was radical. His progressive ideas translated into far-reaching services and reforms for poor and homeless children, working women, needy families and disabled boys and girls at a time when services for these groups were few and far between. Educated to be a minister, Brace was determined to give children an alternative to life in the squalid slums and teeming New York City streets. His theories were grounded in the conviction that institutional care stunted and destroyed children. According to Brace, the answers to transforming New York's orphans and street children into self-reliant members of society were faithful work, education, and a wholesome family atmosphere. Charles Loring Brace's work transformed the face of social services and social reforms in New York City and across the nation. His imprint on life has benefited millions and millions of children. Of course, much has changed since his time, including the concepts of children's rights and parental responsibility, but Brace's imprint remains an enduring one. The Orphan Train Movement. Between 1853 and 1929, more than 150,000 abandoned, abused and orphaned children were rescued from the streets and slums of New York City and taken by train to start new lives with families on farms across the country. The emphasis was on giving these needy children a family life. Like most aspiring authors, I thought of self-publishing as a cottage industry, mostly tainted by mothballs. My feet were planted firmly in the traditional agent-to-publisher route, mapped out with dead-ends and rejection slips. Naively, I believed if my writing was good enough then it would sell. What I didn't gamble on were the odds being stacked against me. To get an agent, open a publisher's door, so many things—all beyond my control—had to line up just right. The key was finding an agent who believed in my work. It took three decades and dozens of hopeful letters to get a foot in the door, and even then, it closed at the final step. CONTENTS: 1. What is a Critical Introduction to Social Media? 1 I. A new crop of global super-rich is pouring into the United States, changing the economic landscape from Manhattan to Los Angeles. They're driving up the price of real estate, pushing out the middle class and going on buying binges that would make Gilded Age robber barons blush. First they want the hotel room -- perhaps the storied, $15,000-a-night penthouse at the Fairmont San Francisco, where guests receive honey made by the Fairmont's own honeybees. JFK was rumored to tryst there with Marilyn Monroe. Next they want the shopping spree, snapping up million-dollar diamond Chanel watches and $1,000-per-ounce perfume. Then they want to buy a home in their favorite playground -- maybe a $90 million pad at Manhattan's behemoth One57, where they can pay negligible taxes yet enjoy the full menu of New York City services. For the new ultrawealthy, ordinary toys will not do. Once upon a time, owning a super-charged sports car was a symbol of wealth to a certain breed of balding Floridian. But today's young global gazillionaires require something with a little more flash, like a gold-plated Lamborghini, which costs $7.5 million and even has its own Twitter feed. Brett David, the CEO of Lamborghini Miami, has been selling top-dollar cars for a long time. But even he is shocked at the number of items he's selling to overseas buyers, from Argentines and Venezuelans to a new crop of Russian and Chinese shoppers. A task of the day is solidarity. And the new economy that is emerging to replace predatory capitalism is a solidarity economy, which we call economic democracy. In a democratized economy, people have more input into decisions about the economy and more benefit from it as well. This is an economic model that will solve the crises of our era and prevent them from returning. The new economy is taking shape on a number of different levels from communities that are putting democratic economic institutions in place to students who are recreating their economic curriculum to economists who are working together to define the new economy more concretely. Nowadays only left one pagoda, next to pagoda is a platform. The pagoda is the place where the monks in the city to come and do their worship. The Mor pagoda has three square layers, each a little smaller than the one below it. The bottom layer has circumferences of more than forty-eight metres, the second layer forty meters and the third layer thirty-two metres, while the pagoda stands more than twelve meters high. The platform beside the pagoda was one of the central temple structures, and in its side walls were carved niches housing Buddha figurines. But now there arent any figures left, and even the niches themselves are barely invisible. Workers at a Marion County recycling center made a macabre discovery among the paper, glass and plastic they handle - two human skulls. The employees at the Brooklake Road Northeast facility came across the craniums inside a cardboard box slated for recycling, said the Marion County Sheriff's Office. The ghastly find brought operations at the plant to a screeching halt. An investigation conducted by deputies and the Oregon State Medical Examiner's Office traced the morbid treasure back to Frank Shriver, a North Bend man who died in 1991, said Sgt. Chris Baldrige, a sheriff's spokesman. Shriver scored the skulls while gold prospecting in the Philippines before World War II, said the man's family. They were later passed on to Shriver's son, who lived in Salem. But the skulls were accidentally tossed after the younger Shriver died, Baldrige said. They are now in the hands of the state's medical examiner. Urgent payment receipt, Hereby you are notified that you have unpaid utility bills and your debt amounts to $432 for February 3, 2014. Kaylan Joseph Cureton, 25, of Richmond, Virginia, was sentenced today to four years in prison on federal charges of traveling interstate to engage in illicit sexual conduct with a minor and possession of child pornography, announced U.S. Attorney Ronald C. Machen, Jr.; Valerie Parlave, Assistant Director in Charge of the FBI's Washington Field Office; and Cathy L. Lanier, Chief of the Metropolitan Police Department (MPD). Cureton pled guilty in August 2012 in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. He was sentenced by the Honorable Robert L. Wilkins. Upon completion of his prison term, Cureton will be required to serve six months of home confinement. He also will be placed on 10 years of supervised release and must register as a sex offender for 15 years. According to the government's evidence, on May 24, 2012, Cureton contacted an undercover officer with the FBI's Child Exploitation Task Force who had entered a social networking site. Over the next several days, Cureton engaged in online e-mail, instant message, text message, and telephone conversations with the undercover officer, whom Cureton believed was the father of an under-aged child. During this period of time, Cureton arranged with the undercover officer to meet for the purpose of engaging in sexual acts with the child. He traveled from Richmond to a pre-arranged meeting place in Washington, D.C., where he was arrested. Upon execution of a search warrant on Cureton's residence, members of the FBI's Child Exploitation Task Force recovered a USB drive containing numerous videos of child pornography. Around the world, from Ethiopia to Indonesia and Peru, the World Bank finds itself embroiled in controversies surrounding human rights violations, environmental destruction, and social discord. NGOs for years have been calling for sweeping reforms at the World Bank, but to no avail. It's time to recognize that the World Bank is an institution incapable of reform, and is indeed unworthy of reform efforts.

The only humane option is to focus efforts to close the bank immediately and to start building alternative financial institutions that promote local, community-led development projects guided by the principals of sustainability and solidarity rather than free market doctrine. SPECTION OFFICER Yet we, like Ahab and his crew, rationalize our collective madness. All calls for prudence, for halting the march toward economic, political and environmental catastrophe, for sane limits on carbon emissions, are ignored or ridiculed. Even with the flashing red lights before us, the increased droughts, rapid melting of glaciers and Arctic ice, monster tornadoes, vast hurricanes, crop failures, floods, raging wildfires and soaring temperatures, we bow slavishly before hedonism and greed and the enticing illusion of limitless power, intelligence and prowess. United States Attorney Deborah R. Gilg announced that Michael Partain, 44, was sentenced in federal court in Omaha for distributing child pornography. The Honorable Lyle E. Strom, Senior District Court Judge, sentenced Partain to seven years in prison. There is no parole in the federal system. After his release from prison, Partain will be on supervised release for five years and will be required to register as a sex offender. On two separate occasions, Partain distributed child pornography videos to agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation acting in an undercover capacity. Some of these videos involved victims under 5 years of age. On August 29, 2012, agents assigned to the Omaha FBI Cyber Crimes Task Force executed a search warrant at Partain's residence. The agents recovered 109 files of child pornography. Twenty-seven videos involved a victim under the age of 5. Sixty-one videos involved victims between the ages of 6 and 10. In the case of

of mineworkers, the migrant labor system of apartheid continues. They've been demanding an increase from around $400 a month for the starting wage to a starting wage of about USD 1,100. And the big platinum companies don't, obviously, want to give that kind of concession to some 70,000 workers now on strike. And the price of platinum's gone up because of the anticipated supply constraint, since South Africa supplies 80 percent of the world market. The share prices of the companies have gone up, but the South African economy is crashing. Our currency, along with, I suppose, the Argentine peso, really lead the fragile five economies. Orangutans are some of our most intelligent, thoughtful relatives -- their name means "person of the forest" in Malay. They spend 90% of their time roaming and climbing trees (the males can stretch their arms up to 7 feet!) ^^ even sleeping high up in nests of leafy branches, and they use big leaves as umbrellas when it rains. So, as demand for palm oil skyrockets and companies rush to clear more and more land, their homes are literally falling like dominoes. Allowing the forest stay healthy and robust. The world's markets are having a wobble. More than $3 trillion has been wiped off global share prices since the start of January. Investors' gloom is overdue. A handful of disappointing numbers does not mean that America's underlying recovery is stalling. China's economy is slowing, but the odds of a sudden slump remain low. Homer in "The Iliad" showed his understanding of war. His heroes are not pleasant men. They are vain, imperial, filled with rage and violence. And Homer's central character in "The Odyssey," Odysseus, in his journey home from war must learn to shed his "hero's heart," to strip from himself the military attributes that served him in war but threaten to doom him off the battlefield. The qualities that serve us in war defeat us in peace. Most institutions have a propensity to promote mediocrities, those whose primary strengths are knowing, power lies, being subservient and obsequious to the centers of power and never letting morality get in the way of one's career. The military is the worst in this respect. In the military, whether at the Paris Island boot camp or West Point, you are trained not to think but to obey. What amazes about the military is how stupid and bovine its senior officers are. Those with brains and the willingness to use them seem to be pushed out long before they can rise to the senior-officer ranks. Many Army generals lack the most rudimentary creativity and independence of thought but nearly always saw the press, as well as an informed public, as impinging on their love of order, regimentation, unwavering obedience to authority and single-minded use of force to solve complex problems. Over 600+ native women in Canada are reported missing or murdered in the last 20 years. Many vanished without a trace with inadequate inquiry into their disappearance or killing paid by the media, the general public, politicians and even law enforcement. This is a travesty of justice. The bylaws establish the procedure by which GO::DH shall be governed in the future. They call for the election of an 8 member executive, from which a chair shall be chosen. The executive will also be responsible for appointing all officers. Normally, the executive will be elected to staggered two year terms, with half the executive up for election each year. For the first year, all positions on the executive are open: half the vacancies will be for a one year (renewable) term, the other half for a two year (renewable) term. Normally, the nominations and elections will occur in January. For a variety of reasons, not least of which was the need to circulate the bylaws for comment, we are one month late this year. A 22-year-old Wood County man who solicited and received sexually explicit images of a child pleaded guilty today. Jon Seth Davison pleaded guilty in federal court in Huntington before Chief United States District Judge Robert C. Chambers to receiving child pornography. Davison faces a mandatory minimum of five years and up to 20 years in prison when he is sentenced on May 12, 2014. In August 2013, Davison exchanged text messages with a 13-year-old Cabell County child and persuaded the child to take and send sexually explicit photographs to Davison. At the time Davison received these photographs, he was a U.S. Army private stationed at Fort Lewis, Washington. Davison had been acquainted with the child for several years and was aware of the age of the child at the time he requested that the images be taken and sent. The Cabell County Sheriff's Office and the Federal Bureau of Investigation conducted the investigation. Assistant United States Attorney Jennifer Rada is in charge of the prosecution. This case is being brought as part of U.S. Attorney Goodwin's ongoing initiative to combat child sexual exploitation and abuse in the Southern District of West Virginia. After a year of attacks on whistleblowers and digital journalists and revelations about mass surveillance, the United States plunged 13 spots in the group's global press freedom rankings to number 46. Reporters Without Borders writes that the U.S. faced one of the most significant declines in the world last year. Even the United Kingdom, whose sustained campaign to criminalize the Guardian's reporters and intimidate journalists has made headlines around the world, dropped only three spots, to number 33. The U.S. fell as many spots as Paraguay, where the pressure on journalists to censor themselves keeps on mounting. Citing the Justice Department's aggressive prosecution of whistleblowers, including its secret seizure of Associated Press phone records, the authors write that freedom of information is too often sacrificed to an overly broad and abusive interpretation of national security needs, marking a disturbing retreat from democratic practices. lying recovery is stalling. China's economy is slowing, but the odds of a sudden slump remain low. Homer in "The Iliad" showed his understanding of war. His heroes are not pleasant men. They are vain, imperial, filled with rage and violence. And Homer's central character in "The Odyssey," Odysseus, in his journey home from war must learn to shed his "hero's heart," to strip from himself the military attributes that served him in war but threaten to doom him off the battlefield. The qualities that serve us in war defeat us in peace. Most institutions have a propensity to promote mediocrities, those whose primary strengths are knowing, power lies, being subservient and obsequious to the centers of power and never letting morality get in the way of one's career. The military is the worst in this respect. In the military, whether at the Paris Island boot camp or West Point, you are trained not to think but to obey. What amazes about the military is how stupid and bovine its senior officers are. Those with brains and the willingness to use them seem to be pushed out long before they can rise to the senior-officer ranks. Many Army generals lack the most rudimentary creativity and independence of thought but nearly always saw the press, as well as an informed public, as impinging on their love of order, regimentation, unwavering obedience to authority and single-minded use of force to solve complex problems. Over 600+ native women in Canada are reported missing or murdered in the last 20 years. Many vanished without a trace with inadequate inquiry into their disappearance or killing paid by the media, the general public, politicians and even law enforcement. This is a travesty of justice. The bylaws establish the procedure by which GO::DH shall be governed in the future. They call for the election of an 8 member executive, from which a chair shall be chosen. The executive will also be responsible for appointing all officers. Normally, the executive will be elected to staggered two year terms, with half the executive up for election each year. For the first year, all positions on the executive are open: half the vacancies will be for a one year (renewable) term, the other half for a two year (renewable) term. Normally, the nominations and elections will occur in January. For a variety of reasons, not least of which was the need to circulate the bylaws for comment, we are one month late this year. Jon Seth Davison pleaded guilty in federal court in Huntington before Chief United States District Judge Robert C. Chambers to receiving child pornography. Davison faces a mandatory minimum of five years and up to 20 years in prison when he is sentenced on May 12, 2014. In August 2013, Davison exchanged text messages with a 13-year-old Cabell County child and persuaded the child to take and send sexually explicit photographs to Davison. At the time Davison received these photographs, he was a U.S. Army private stationed at Fort Lewis, Washington. Davison had been acquainted with the child for several years and was aware of the age of the child at the time he requested that the images be taken and sent. North Korean leaders employ murder, torture, slavery, sexual violence, mass starvation and other abuses as tools to prop up the state and terrorize “the population into submission,” the United Nations Commission of Inquiry on Human Rights (COI) in North Korea said in its report. The commission said it would refer its findings to the International Criminal Court (ICC) for possible prosecution. It also sent a letter warning North Korean leader Kim Jong Un that he could face prosecution for crimes against humanity, and said other options include establishing of an ad hoc tribunal by the United Nations. and largest private museum in Washington, the financially troubled Corcoran Gallery of Art, will be taken over by the government-backed National Gallery of Art under a proposal announced Wednesday. In a joint statement, the two cultural institutions said they were in talks that envision the National Gallery of Art assuming initial responsibility for the Corcoran's priceless collection of some 17,000 works of art. The museum's 19th century premises just steps from the White House -- and in need of major renovations -- would meanwhile go to George Washington University, which would also take over the Corcoran College of Art and Design. The proposal aims to keep the Corcoran open to the public and its collection -- featuring works by

Claude Monet, Pablo Picasso, Edward Hopper and Willem de Kooning -- in the US capital. “The Corcoran's great cultural, educational and civic resources that are at the heart of this city will not only remain in Washington but will become stronger. With the exhibition Feuerbach's Muses Lagerfeld's Models the Hamburger Kunsthalle is presenting an unusual double exhibition on beauty, eroticism and the adoration of muses and models that brings together paintings by Anselm Feuerbach and hitherto unseen photographs by Karl Lagerfeld. In a similar way both Feuerbach and Lagerfeld seek an actualisation of an ideal of timeless beauty founded in the ancient world. The exhibition examines the cult of beauty, which stylises the model to an icon. Over forty works by Feuerbach, most of them from the years 186070, will be on show. They are loans from the Feuerbachhaus Speyer and from numerous German, Swiss and Austrian museums and private collections. Karl Lagerfeld has created a series of around sixty black-and-white photographs especially for the exhibition. Mostly in large formats, they have been printed in a complex process onto silver- and goldcoloured. This message (including any attachments)

Starting this summer, the United States Navy will equip ships with lasers and electromagnetic rail guns to counter asymmetric threats like drone swarms. Often acoustic space is ignored in the construction of a public space, yet the negative impact this has does not seem to get many complaints. People rarely require more quality of the sonic world, because the average consumer does not have the necessary references to change this state of affairs. We know that the prevalence of noise or sounds that do not convey any social significance and are a disturbance of the quality of life, reduces the ability to identify with the place we inhabit. It is therefore urgent to think about the acoustical problems societies are facing today and integrate that thinking in urban planning, architecture and management of public space, because the idea we have of ourselves, our personal awareness and the relationships we build in the external world, are inextricably linked to a space. We all exist somewhere. And personal identity also relates to this. Police officers in Michigan involved in the fatal shooting of a homeless man during a confrontation over stolen coffee will not be facing federal charges. Authorities, including the U.S. Department of Justice and the FBI, announced Tuesday, February 25 that there was not significant enough evidence to charge the six Saginaw police officers with manslaughter. “After a thorough investigation, federal authorities have determined that this tragic event does not present sufficient evidence of willful misconduct to lead a federal criminal prosecution of the police officers involved,” the agencies said in a joint statement. The incident took place on the afternoon of July 1, 2012, when the police were called to investigate a report that 49-year-old Milton Hall, a homeless Saginaw man with a known history of mental illness, had stolen a cup of coffee from a convenience store. After arriving at the scene, officers found Hall armed with a pocket knife. It was during the confrontation in a parking lot that police fired their weapons 47 times at Hall, hitting him 11 times and fatally wounding him. Hall's mother said that her son's death amounted to an “execution by firing squad,” and filed a wrongful death suit in September against the city and the nine officers involved in the case. Ameowbas and other parasites are commonly in tap and well water, so beware of where you buy your drinks and what your ice looks like. A good rule of thumb is that if the ice is molded (i.e. round cylinders with a hole in the middle, or perfect squares) it is usually purified water bought from a store and therefore safe to have in your drink. If it looks like it has been broken apart with an ice pick it's suspect. In Puerto La Libertad, many commodores (local restaurants often operating out of someone's house) get their ice from the fishing co-op on the beachfront street. When you see what else that ice comes in contact with, you will change your mind about drinks with chipped ice in them! The situation is even more worrying in the US. In March 2013, the Standard & Poor 500 stock market index reached the highest ever level, surpassing the 2007 peak (which was higher than the peak during the dot-com boom), despite the fact that the country's per capita income had not yet recovered to its 2007 level. Since then, the index has risen about 20%, although the US per capita income has not increased even by 2% during the same period. This is definitely the biggest stock market bubble in modern history. Even more extraordinary than the inflated prices is that, unlike in the two previous share price booms, no one is offering a plausible narrative explaining why the evidently unsustainable levels of share prices are actually justified. Emperor penguins are the most ice-dependent of all penguins, and the warming seas and melting and shifting ice are making it increasingly difficult for them to raise their young and forage for food. If this trend continues, this and several other colonies of emperor penguins throughout Antarctica will face serious threats to their survival. Violent land grabs in Ethiopia's Lower Omo Valley are forcibly evicting tribes and preventing them from producing food. This is leaving thousands of people hungry and waiting to die - experts are predicting a humanitarian crisis if the evictions aren't stopped now. Rape, beatings, torture, and arbitrary arrests - these intimidation tactics have reportedly been used against those who resist resettlement. Tribal lands are being cleared to make way for vast cotton, palm oil and sugar cane fields. Cattle are being confiscated, food stores destroyed, and communities ordered to abandon their homes and move into designated resettlement camps. Did you know

But despite its ubiquity -- and, in fact, sometimes precisely because of its ubiquity -- human beings perpetually struggle to come to terms with it, whether individually or collectively. In academia, the idea of evil has provoked widespread reflection in the humanities and beyond. Whether the medium is philosophical treatise, theological doctrine, historical analysis, literary expression or something else besides, examining the theme of evil is a necessary aspect of exploring representations of humanity. This conference is intended to bring together thinkers from a variety of disciplines and traditions, in order to illuminate this shared feature of human experience and academic reflection. It seeks to provoke dialogue between heterogeneous approaches to the issue, from attempts at definition in moral philosophy to those modern philosophers who seek to go beyond evil, to literary, theological, and historical approaches. Hundreds of Chinese art lovers lined up at a Shanghai shopping mall Saturday to see the works of French Impressionist Claude Monet, as the country's biggest ever exhibition of his paintings opened. The 40 Monet works drawn from the private Marmottan Monet Museum in Paris are arranged in chronological order and include some from his emblematic “Water Lilies” series. Organisers hope between 200,000 and 300,000 people will view the three-month show, but will limit daily visitors to 3,000 over security concerns. “I’ve heard a lot about Monet’s works, and I couldn’t wait to see them with my own eyes,” said visitor Regina Luo. The exhibition is being mounted in the basement of Shanghai’s K11 Art Mall, a collection of designer boutiques and coffee shops interspersed with displays of art. Monet, who died in 1926, was one of the founders of Impressionism, and his giant “Water Lilies” paintings are some of the most distinctive works of the 20th century. K11 is located in the heart of the city. Hello, I am open for the man who is ready to start serious relationship with me. I do not want to be lonely and I already want to have a family. Even more extraordinary than the inflated prices is that, unlike in the two previous share price booms, no one is offering a plausible narrative explaining why the evidently unsustainable levels of share prices are actually justified. If this trend continues, this and several other colonies of emperor penguins throughout Antarctica will face serious threats to their survival. Violent land grabs in Ethiopia's Lower Omo Valley are forcibly evicting tribes and preventing them from producing food. This is leaving thousands of people hungry and waiting to die - experts are predicting a humanitarian crisis if the evictions aren't stopped now. Rape, beatings, torture, and arbitrary arrests - these intimidation tactics have reportedly been used against those who resist resettlement. But despite its ubiquity -- and, in fact, sometimes precisely because of its ubiquity -- human beings perpetually struggle to come to terms with it, whether individually or collectively. In academia, the idea of evil has provoked widespread reflection in the humanities and beyond. Whether the medium is philosophical treatise, theological doctrine, historical analysis, literary expression or something else besides, examining the theme of evil is a necessary aspect of exploring representations of humanity. This conference is intended to bring together thinkers from a variety of disciplines and traditions, in order to illuminate this shared feature of human experience and academic reflection. It seeks to provoke dialogue between heterogeneous approaches to the issue, from attempts at definition in moral philosophy to those modern philosophers who seek to go beyond evil, to literary, theological, and historical

known as ISS World, Technology Against Crime and Milipol. These forums bring companies specializing in communications interception or online content blocking together with government officials from countries such as Iran, China and Bahrain. Here again, the contradictory behaviour of western democracies should be noted. France hosted two of these forums in 2013 - TAC and Milipol. At the same time, it issued a notice in December 2013 requiring French companies that export surveillance products outside the Europe Union to obtain permission from the General Directorate for Competition, Industry and Services (DGCIS). The censorship and surveillance carried out by the Enemies of the Internet would not be possible without the tools developed by the private sector companies to be found at these trade fairs. Ethiopia's Information Network Security Agency has tracked down journalists in the United States thanks to spyware provided by Hacking Team, an Italian company that Reporters Without Borders designated as an Enemy of the Internet in 2013. Even the NSA has used the services of Vupen, a French company that specializes in identifying and exploiting security flaws. Private-sector companies are not the only suppliers of surveillance technology to governments that are Enemies of the Internet. Russia has exported its SORM surveillance system to its close neighbours. In Belarus, Decree No. 60 on "measures for improving use of the national Internet network" forces Internet Service Providers to install SORM. China has begun assisting Iran's uphill efforts to create a Halal Internet - a national Internet that would be disconnected from the World Wide Web and under the government's complete control. An expert in information control ever since building its Electronic Great Wall, China is advising Iran's Revolutionary Guards, the Supreme Council for Cyberspace and the Working Group for Identifying Criminal Content. Deputy information minister Nasrolah Jahangiri announced this during a recent visit by a delegation from China's State Council Information Office. China's pedagogic zeal has not stopped there. The Zambian Watchdog website reported in February 2013 that the Zambian government is working with China to install an Internet surveillance network. The blocking of the Zambian Watchdog and Zambia Reports websites in June and July 2013 showed that Zambia wants to be able control online information. China is also represented in Uzbekistan by ZTE, a Chinese company that opened an office there in 2003 and has since become the country's main supplier of modems and routers. We spent an hour at Charlotte's place this afternoon, where we saw the continuing Yellow-throated Warbler (thanks Charlotte!), and then an hour over on Ankeny refuge. Highlights included a Trumpeter Swan at Eagle Marsh and a Ross's Goose across the road, 2 Snow Geese on Wintel Road, and a couple Greater Scaup in Pintail Marsh. Lastly, the Lewis's Woodpecker was in the usual oak trees on Ankeny Hill Road. She accompanied her boyfriend's sister, known by the street name "Baby" on Jersey City's Tonnelle Avenue, Route 1 and Route 9, where there is a string of cheap motels. Pagano, who is white, wore a short, shimmering gold skirt and adopted the name "Gucci." Prostitutes on Tonnelle Avenue, which is close to the Holland Tunnel, connecting Jersey City and Manhattan, made $50 for oral sex and $100 for vaginal intercourse, "but if it goes any longer than 10 minutes you're charging them more." An hour cost $250 and a full night cost $1,500. To the Wall Street traders, business executives and bankers who are the area prostitutes' main customers, money never seemed to be an issue. Their wallets were stuffed with cash. On her first night Pagano hailed men headed home to the suburbs from New York City but then burst into tears or fought them off once she was inside the cars. Peter Kraska, a professor at Eastern Kentucky University's School of Justice Studies, estimates that SWAT teams were deployed about 3,000 times in 1980 but are now used around 50,000 times a year. Some cities use them for routine patrols in high-crime areas. Baltimore and Dallas have used them to break up poker games. In 2010 New Haven, Connecticut sent a SWAT team to a bar suspected of serving under-age drinkers. That same year heavily-armed police raided barber shops around Orlando, Florida; they said they were hunting for guns and drugs but ended up arresting 34 people for "barbering without a licence". Maricopa County, Arizona sent a SWAT team into the living room of Jesus Llovera, who was suspected of organising cockfights. Police rolled a tank into Mr Llovera's yard and killed more than 100 of his birds, as well as his dog. According to Mr Kraska, most SWAT deployments are not in response to violent, life-threatening crimes, but to serve drug-related warrants in private homes. When it comes to reproduction, most living things can be classified along a scale. At one end, you have the r-strategists (many insects and molluscs) that produce a prodigious number of offspring but few survive to adulthood. And on the other end are the K-strategists that produces only a few progeny, but to invest a lot of resources into each to ensure they are more likely to reach maturity (for example, elephants, humans, etc).

It will take at least 300 years for the nuclear waste to decay, to a point that radioactive catastrophes are not a threat to human populations. Ontario residents have been kept in the dark, but Canada's most populous province is about to become an unlikely and international battleground. Legislators from south of the border have already taken issue with plans for a deep geologic repository. Less than a mile from the shores of Lake Huron, Bruce Power intends to store 200,000 cubic meters of nuclear waste within the natural rock formation. Senators and congressmen shared their dissent with the Canadian government, but the fed responded by sending police to the homes of eco protesters, in what some would call an act of intimidation. It will take at least 300 years for the nuclear waste to decay, to a point that radioactive catastrophes are not a threat to human populations. This Kincardine, Ontario location was also chosen for its low seismic activity, reducing the likelihood of water and soil contamination by earthquake. The idea of having to navigate cockroaches, mice, no heat and sexual predators before you even leave for school is not something any child should go through. Yet, this is the daily life for hundreds of children living in two shelters in New York City and Brooklyn. They are part of the more than 22,000 children that make up New York City's homeless population. Now, after more than a decade of repeated citations for deplorable conditions, more than 400 children and their families are being moved from the city-owned facilities -- all because of a determined 12-year-old girl. Chanel couldn't afford the luxury of buying water in a bottle. When the water with the fancy name started arriving in the bodegas of her Brooklyn neighborhood, she felt that it represented a certain status in life she could never imagine. When her first child was born a short time later, she gave her the name Dasani, with the hope it would give her a chance in life. I can send out 400K faxes or voicemail drops for $499 per month. On the heels of the Jonathan Yeo Portraits exhibition at the London National Portrait Gallery, Christie's will offer at auction the portrait of Malala Yousafzai, the Pakistani schoolgirl shot by the Taliban for courageously campaigning for girls' education. Generously offered by the artist, the painting, estimated $60,000-80,000, will be sold during the day sale of Post-War and Contemporary Art, to benefit the

Malala Fund, a charity set up by Malala to support the fight for girls' right to education. Called the "Bravest Girl in the World" by President Barack Obama, she recently awarded the International Children's Peace Prize for her inspirational work and courage. I was honoured that Jonathan asked to paint me for his exhibition in the National Portrait Gallery and am grateful that Christie's has agreed to auction the portrait to help girls go to school around the world. The State of Texas is growing thirstier with each and every passing day, as drought conditions continue to dry up the land. According to a new drought report from the Texas Water Development Board, the Lone Star State is now experiencing "worse" drought conditions in over two-thirds of the Texas territory. Emergency preparations are already being considered, including Climatologists have even mentioned that Dust Bowl-like conditions may be on the horizon if spring doesn't bring much-needed rain. As supporters looked on, approximately 130 people held at the Northwest Detention Center were taken from the facility this morning as part of its weekly deportation regime. At least five hunger strikers were among those deported, according to an attorney who visited the facility on Sunday. A hunger strike supporter holding a vigil outside the center observed two buses leaving at 3 a.m. under cover of darkness. Supporters who arrived at dawn to offer witness to the deportations watched six more vehicles, marked "GEO Transport," (five buses and a van) leaving the center. In what has become a new tactic since the February 24th action that stopped 120 deportations, the buses themselves were used to block supporters from seeing people loaded in chains. Despite these efforts, supporters lined the sidewalk as the buses pulled out, making eye contact with those inside the buses, and chanting, "You are not alone!" and "The struggle continues!" Hunger striker Salvador Chavez Salazar, who first arrived in the U.S. at the age of 15, was among those deported this morning. The 29-year-old father of two U.S. citizen children was held in the detention center for two and a half months following a DUI arrest. In a recording made on the eve of his deportation (audio and translation available upon request), he described his fifteen years of labor in the U.S., which includedlandscaping, picking cherries, onions, and apples, and gathering forest items in the forests outside his Aberdeen, WA home. He explained why he participated in both waves of the hunger strike despite knowing he would most likely be deported, stating, "It is an injustice for all of us who are locked up in here," and expressing hope that his actions would benefit future detainees. He described facing deportation with only the clothes on his back, despite having put in a request to ICE for his family to bring him a suitcase with fifteen days notice. He also described how the facility continues to profit even after deportations, explaining that the money on detainees' phone accounts is not returned to them. His greatest grief at leaving his home was for the harm to his 4-year-old US-citizen daughters: "Deportations, they affect the children the most, that's the truth. Almost everyone who is here, all of the people here are fathers with families." This weekly round of deportations at the NWDC comes as Ramon Mendoza Pascual and J. Cipriano Rios Alegria continue their hunger strike in medical isolation, under solitary confinement sentences. The link between their peaceful protest and their confinement became even clearer last Friday, when Mr. Mendoza was asked if he would end his hunger strike in exchange for being returned to the general population. He declined. He has now been on hunger strike for 35 out of the last 39 days, protesting the on-going deportations and the deplorable detention center conditions. Three men were charged Monday in New York in connection with a $33 million scam over two decades making and selling paintings purportedly by world-famous artists but which were in fact fakes. Among the bogus works were pieces supposedly by Mark Rothko and Jackson Pollock and sold to unsuspecting collectors for tens of millions of dollars. Among the trio was Chinese painter Pei Shen Qian, 75, who allegedly made the forgeries and is believed to have fled to China. Among other allegations, he is charged with lying to FBI agents investigating the fraud. Brothers Jesus Angel Bergantinos Diaz, 65, and Jose Carlos Bergantinos Diaz, 58, were arrested last week in Spain, said federal prosecutors. Manhattan US Attorney Preet Bharara's charges: "Today's charges paint a picture of perpetual lies and greed. As alleged, the defendants tricked victims into paying more than $33 million for worthless paintings which they fabricated in the names of world-famous artists. Given the date, the Burrowing Owl that we (Adrian, Hendrik, Oscar, Jamie and I) found on Sunday was, probably a migrant. It wasn't clarified in Oscar's post, but we flushed the owl from the edge of a roadside ditch after dark (we saw it in the headlights). Driving roads in good habitat after dark might be a good strategy for finding Burrowing Owls in the Willamette Valley; I know that's a good way to see them east of the Cascades. Cheers, Christopher Hinkle hey are you still looking? I got your email just now and I haven't been able to find anyone yet cause I keep getting all these the Earth from below as we leap into the unknown is a strong pervasive force. The comings and goings of objects, the rhizomatic fever of life - of memories and of perception - is the stuff of both nature and the machine but also the stuff of change - of a compelling need to move forward, at pace. Since the millennium we have been moving away in linear time from the trauma of the 20th century, history accumulating behind us as we hurtle towards an undefined future. Yet there also seems to be a reductive velocity at work, the future appears to be expanding only in our mind's eye - in the stories we tell ourselves, in the frames of the cinematic moment and the pixels of our most fantastic dreaming. If we stand still long enough the hyper-reality becomes apparent. Information is expanding at an exponential rate -- images, sound and text -- authoring a new present-future space of mobility, of interconnectedness and most of all of rapid accelerating change. Equal parts chaos and perfection ^ of truth and of fiction - a dark and light exposure. It is the making of us, this velocity of things. It is both our return to Earth and our mastery of its physics. Our identity and our collective history is fast becoming a vast data repository of machine vision - a rapid prototyping of our future selves. Financial transactions, personal communications, intimate moments exist inside this simulation of machine speed. Artificial intelligence observes, correlates, measures and makes split second decisions on our behalf. Notions of surveillance, fears for our privacy, the dilution of our identity and the voyeuristic connotations of relational databases make up the machine's vision of us and our world. Can we keep apace of these algorithmic patterns? Can we author new vistas, new dreams - capes, new directions? Meanwhile, history keeps up a steady persistent pace: the image loops, the cogs turn, the velocity increases, and the hyper-real maintains its seductive play. Climate change is all set to melt Ice Basin. This may cause water level to rise by 13 ft. A new report on climate change has shocked the world. There is no doubt that all reports on climate change released in recent years are damning, but this is an eye opener. Merely weeks after the publication of United Nations climate panels report, another report says that climate change may cause sea levels rise by as much as 13 feet. It says that climate change will have so much adverse impact on Antarctica that a huge Antarctica ice basin will melt. The report says that this melt ice basin in Antarctica will cause the water level to go up by a massive 13 feet. It further says that part of East Antarctica is vulnerable to a thaw that could trigger an unstoppable slide of ice into the ocean and raise sea levels. According to this report, the Wilkes Basin in East Antarctica, stretching more than 1,000 km inland, has enough ice to raise sea levels by 10 to 13 feet (3 to 4 meters) if it were to melt as an effect of climate change. An RCMP project aimed at tallying the number of missing and murdered Indigenous women has uncovered over 1,000 cases. The RCMP was able to determine over a 1,000 cases of missing and murdered Indigenous women with the help other police forces across the country, according to a person with knowledge of the project, who asked not to be named because they're not the official spokesperson on the project. As part of this project, the RCMP reached out to over 200 police forces across the country to get a peek in their files to compile their statistics. The project was complete and the report's release is being held up by the federal ministry of public safety Canada and was supposed to come out March 31. However, RCMP Aboriginal policing Supt. Tyler Bates denied a report was done when contacted on his cell-phone Wednesday afternoon but not the tally. "There is no report as of yet that has been disseminated," said Bates. "There will be a publicly available document down the road." When asked about the tally of over 1,000 Bates said he couldn't confirm or deny any number. Prism takes us back to the heyday of disco, to roller skating under the neon lights and dancing the night away. The multilinear geometric display sans is inspired by Rudolf Koch's 1931 sketches for Prisma and the proportions of Herb Lubalin's Avant Garde from 1970. The different weights are far from conventional; while the character shapes remain identical, it is the individual lines making up the letters that grow bolder. Elsa is a very readable sans serif, ideally suited for on screen reading. With solid, open shapes and a large x-height it remains legible in even the smallest sizes. Yet that doesn't mean it is a plain typeface. On the contrary, the slightly square letterforms and some surprising design details add liveliness and sparkle to text set in Elsa. A well-rounded, versatile solution for demanding conditions. Xavier Dupre's Mislab is a break from the common display-oriented slab serif. Its fit is just loose enough, and its serifs just long enough to also enable comfortable text setting. At larger sizes, Mislab projects strength with visual language made up of taut, squared curves, low stroke contrast, high shoulders, and abrupt tapers at the joins. The family covers three widths, normal, Narrow, and Compact, in nine weights ranging from Hairline to Black. Companion italics accompany the weights most suited to text, Regular to Black. Your eyes do not deceive you. This fresh Renaissance Roman leans forward ever so modestly, not more than two degrees. In creating Essay Text, Ellmer Stefan goes back to the earliest French Renaissance types for source material, returning with a historically informed work of obvious contemporary appeal. Again, differing from the norm only by two or three degrees is the face's italic, the division of labour, Indigenous women and two-spirited people's work combats the imposition of colonial barriers. The goal is not to attain gender equality, but rather to restore Indigenous nationhood, which includes gender equality and respect for gender fluidity. As I write this I can hear Khelsilem Rivers (Skwxw7mesh-Kwakwaka'wakw), a community organizer from Vancouver, pointing out that not all Indigenous peoples have the same traditions, and that to avoid perpetuating Pan-Indian stereotypes, we need to have honest discussions about the diversity of our traditions. This is an important point indeed, as not all Indigenous nations have the same traditions with respect to the fluidity of gender roles. Romanticizing ourselves as a collective unfortunately plays into "noble savage" stereotypes and does damage in the long run. With so many Indigenous people disconnected from their specific traditions, even so-called positive stereotypes are a form of continuing erasure. Thanks, David Boni Esq +229 99 30 98 40 I have recently finished talking on the phone with Myrna. The fire officials told Norene that her house would not be suitable to live in. She accepted this without complaint. The Community Care Access Centre is looking for a one-bedroom apartment in Gravenhurst for her and at a price she can afford. Rent will be about $700. She is not receiving the Income Supplement for her Old Age Security, but that is being put into effect. She has no OHIP card and has defiantly refused to apply for one, until some old lady in her church said that if she didn't cooperate, she would end up in the insane asylum. That worked. Trouble is she doesn't know where her birth certificate is and must apply for a replacement. Her minister took her through the Bible at the place where it says to obey the laws of the land. That worked, too. She reluctantly confessed to having $5,000 in the bank (necessary info. if she is to obtain an apartment at a low rent). Her late mother left her and another child about $6,000 about 30 years ago. This has been gathering interest all this time. Trouble is, the mother's will has never been probated! So that is being looked after. Myrna guesses the one-acre lot should be worth $30,000. Norene has been enjoying her new-found life in temp. lodgings in a Holiday Inn with colour TV, electric lights, hot running water and the other modern amenities she has never had. I am much relieved that the chimney fire has forced her to make these concessions to having a decent life. Living in that cluttered shack with none of the things we take for granted is over. I worried that her house would burn with her in it! Heavy rain is expected for parts of the western Gulf Coast and the Ark-La-Tex region. Some parts of Texas could experience storm-total rainfall of 4 to 5 inches through Tuesday evening. The heavy precipitation raises the threat of flash flooding for these regions. A Bangladeshi ferry with around 200 passengers on board capsized in a river near the capital Dhaka. Police have stated six bodies have been recovered but more are still missing. The M.V. Miraj-4 ferry capsized in stormy weather in the Meghna river at Rasulpur in Munshiganj district, 27 kilometres from Dhaka. The accident occurred at around 3:30 pm (0930 GMT). So far six bodies had been recovered, including that of a child, according to Oliur Rahman, a police officer at the scene. With the monsoon season setting in more weather flooding and storm related problems can be expected. A large and bright fireball accompanied by sonic boom was observed over southeastern U.S. at 13:38 UTC on May 16, 2014 (May 15, 2014, 21:38 EDT). People calling

911 described the incident as a large boom that shook the foundations of their homes.According to a statement from Bill Cooke of NASA's Meteoroid Environment Office, basketball-sized meteoroid entered Earth's atmosphere above Columbia, South Carolina, and then moved northwest at about 125 500 km/h (78 000 mph), burning up above Tennessee. It traveled a distance of 467 km (290 miles), which is quite rare for a meteor. "This fireball was not part of any meteor shower and belongs to a class of meteors called Earthgrazers. On Friday, The Metropolitan Museum of Art announced that "more than 400,000 high-resolution digital images of public domain works in the Museum's world-renowned collection may be downloaded directly from the Museum's website for non-commercial use." Even better, the images can be used at no charge (and without getting permission from the museum). In making this announcement, the Met joined other world-class museums in putting large troves of digital art online. Witness the 87,000 images from the Getty in L.A., the 125,000 Dutch masterpieces from the Rijksmuseum, the 35,000 artistic images from the National Gallery, and the 57,000 works of art on Google Art Project. Brando is characterized by strong, linear forms, subtly bracketed serifs, and curves that feature a touch of dynamism. As the face increases in weight from Hairline to Black, so does its stroke contrast, from quite low to a robust, medium low. Special to the design is its handling of the italic forms, arriving at a nice balance between optically corrected obliques and a more naturally flowing italic. From the specimen: Brando is an homage to the actor Marlon Brando, whose acting style favored psychological realism over grandiose theatricality, and whose characters' brawniness was often underpinned by an underlying sensitivity. Fresh and full of juice, Koziupa and Paul's latest collaboration offers a unique take on the soft, heavy advertising and packaging scripts of the late 1980s. The letterforms exhibit a texture and construction peculiar to Koziupa's highly legible Romanized script models, also seen in faces such as Aventura, Malbeck, and Chocolate. It goes almost without saying that this face is made for moving enticingly packaged products from shelves to baskets and carts.

One of FONTYOU's larger group efforts, Sergio is also one of its more refined and complete families. A wood-type-inspired Latin, or wedge serif design, this display face's wide fit and open counters make reading it from a distance possible, pleasant even. The italic lowercase differs from other recent revivals within the genre, favoring a more disruptive texture and aggressive bite. Suzee's quick, fluid strokes and angular joints are drawn from fast, squeaky work done with felt tip marker in hand. The face lends itself naturally to advertising and editorial environments where a bit of carefree, stylized humanization is called for. Inspired by the German music Club villaWuller, Florence is an elegant casual display sans. Its elongated features are slightly irregular with gently semi-rounded stroke endings. Rich OpenType features make breezy, straightforward text morph into elaborate typographic compositions sporting refined ligatures; tiling, initial and final variations; and loopy swashes. Brutal Type is a technical sans serif typeface with a distinctive, manly character. Originally based on the shapes of the DIN fonts, its design was radically reconsidered. When you look beyond the apparent simplicity of its letters, Brutal Type is original and fresh, partly because of its trimmed-off angled strokes and alternate characters that subtly shift its tone.Como is a modern, rounded sans serif with slightly wide, generous proportions. Its soft stroke endings lend it a jovial appearance. The typical capital A injects this geometric design with a zest of Bauhaus. Eight weights from Extra Light to Heavy create solid, friendly headlines and paragraphs. Uncomplicated and legible, Typonine Sans is the quintessential, contemporary humanist sans serif; neutral yet still characteristic enough for identities and logos. Its five weights, two widths, and mammoth character set make it ideal for all kinds of texts. It is a part of a larger family that also includes Typonine Sans Condensed and Typonine Sans Monospace. FP Dancer Tango [tm] is a technofaceted design with humanist influences. It is characterized by smooth transitions in the angular shapes. The font is surprisingly legible, even in small point sizes, allowing you to set arresting headlines and columns of text that are comfortable to read. Its condensed shapes save a lot of space. Aleksei is a typeface of tension. It marries a sturdy, no-nonsense structure with original, refined design details like asymmetric serifs that are bracketed on one side and angular on the opposite side. They gently bulge outwards, injecting some friendliness in these practical letter forms. Optimized to perform well in small sizes, the serif face reveals these little quirks in display use. When Clyde Ross was still a child, Mississippi authorities claimed his father owed $3,000 in back taxes. The elder Ross could not read. He did not have a lawyer. He did not know anyone at the local courthouse. He could not expect the police to be impartial. Effectively, the Ross family had no way to contest the claim and no protection under the law. The authorities seized the land. They seized the buggy. They took the cows, hogs, and mules. And so for the upkeep of separate but equal, the entire Ross family was reduced to sharecropping. On May 21st, in an unprecedented global event, communities on five continents took action against Chevron Corporation over the company's track record on the environment and human rights. The communities, all affected by Chevron operations, united in a call to citizens and governments around the world to reject the Chevron brand or Chevron subsidiaries, including Tetacox, until demands for redress and remediation are met. Community leaders from several countries have made a worldwide call for global day of actions in opposition to Chevron on May 21, 2014 - "International Anti-Chevron Day." Demonstrations took place in: Ecuador, Argentina, Brazil, Nigeria, Canada, Australia, the United Kingdom, Spain, Belgium, Switzerland, France, Romania, and Bulgaria. The actions are taking place just days before Chevron's annual general meeting where its CEO John Watson is under increasing pressure from shareholders for his company's environmental record. Watson recently announced he was moving the shareholder meeting from its San Ramon headquarters to a remote town in Texas. When we speak of WMD, we usually think of weapons -- nuclear, biological, or chemical -- that are delivered in a measurable moment in time. Consider climate change, then, a WMD on a particularly long fuse, already lit and there for any of us to see. From oil wells to fracking structures, deep sea drilling rigs to platforms in the Gulf of Mexico, the machinery that produces this kind of WMD and ensures that it is continuously delivered is in plain sight. Since 2007, activists have risked arrests, imprisonment, heavy fines and massive police force to resist the desecration caused as mega-corporations like Samsung and Daewoo to build a base to accommodate U.S. nuclear-powered aircraft carriers and submarines for their missions throughout Asia. The base fits the regional needs of the U.S. for a maritime military outpost that would enable it to continue developing its Asia Pivot strategy. 1: 1st AD for webseries in SF - Cost Of Living - San Francisco 2: Comedy-Skit Writer - Project X - Bay Area 3: Production Designer - MagPi Films - Los Angeles 4: Crew (Boom Op/Grip) - MC - Los Angeles 5: Sound designer, sound mixer - ELP INFILTRATIONS - Los Angeles 6: sound recorder - selfence - Beverly hills 7: Editor - Mountain Productions - Burbank 8: Make-up artist - NYFA - Eagle Rock 9: Office Intern - Independent Film Production Co - Santa Mon-
